

THE LEGEND OF THE CHINESE ZODIAC

Thousands of years ago, the Jade Emperor of China organized a race for animals. The first 12 animals to finish were to be given a place in the Zodiac and have a year named after them.

The Cat and the Rat were very close friends. Since they were both late-risers, they asked the Ox to wake them at dawn on the day of the race. The day of the race came. The Ox tried to wake the Cat and the Rat, but they both just kept rolling over and falling back to sleep. The race was about to start. Unwilling to leave them, the Ox coaxed them onto his back and started running. The Rat woke up just as the Ox was crossing the last hurdle, a river.

The clever Rat knew that he could never beat the Cat in the race. He took the chance fate offered to him and pushed the cat off the Ox's back. When the Ox reached the other side, the Rat jumped off and scampered to victory, just ahead of the Ox.

So the 12-year cycle of the Chinese Zodiac begins with the Rat. After him comes the Ox, followed by the Tiger. After them come the Rabbit, Dragon, Snake, Horse, Goat, Monkey, Rooster, Dog and Pig, in that order. The cat, it must be noted, has no place in the zodiac. She wasn't among the first twelve and that is why to this day cats and rats don't get along together.

2023: THE YEAR OF THE RABBIT

Each animal of the Chinese New Year has certain characteristics. The Rabbit is kind, positive, and often a great scholar. Their kindness can sometimes be mistaken as weakness, but the Rabbit's quiet personality hides great confidence and strength. While careful in their actions and choices, the Rabbit loves spontaneity and surprises. Last year, the Year of the Tiger, was a time of adventure and new challenges. The Year of the Rabbit is said to continue that energy and be full of excitement, prosperity, and surprises.

WHAT WE LEARNED TODAY

The Shaolin Martial Arts and the Chinese zodiac have some common animals. In the martial arts, these animals teach us movements and mindsets to help us with everyday life. Try using the animal exercises to improve your focus and interactions in school.

BELLY BREATHING

Belly breathing has many benefits. It can help you focus, keep you calm, and increase your confidence. In each of the exercises we practiced, use your belly breathing to make them more effective.

Key Points to Remember

- Breathe in through the nose and make the belly get big.
- Breathe out through the mouth and squeeze the belly in.
- Breathing should be as quiet as possible.

DRAGON RIDES THE WIND - Calm the Mind

The wise dragon knows how to stay calm under pressure. Use dragon breath when you feel nervous, upset, or just need to take a moment before facing a challenging situation.

Key Points to Remember

- Inhale and press your hands up with your palms touching.
- Turn your hands out and spread your wings as you exhale.
- Relax your hands at your sides or on your desk as you focus your eyes.

TIGER REACHES FOR SKY - Calm the Body

The powerful tiger can stay still for a long time and wait patiently. When the tiger needs a break, it stretches for a moment, then settles back and becomes still again. If you are having trouble staying still, stretch like the tiger to calm your body.

Key Points to Remember

- Make your hands into claws with your palms facing up.
- Exhale and push your palms straight up, stretching your spine.
- Inhale and relax your hands to the starting position.

SNAKE SEEKS STILLNESS - Concentrate and Focus

The mindful snake focuses intensely on one thing. Its supple body may move, but its eyes remain fixed on what it should be paying attention to. Use the focus of the snake to stay on task and avoid distractions.

Key Points to Remember

- Use belly breathing slowly and rhythmically.
- Keep your eyes and your mind focused on the teacher or your work.
- Hold your body still, but not stiff; be supple like the snake.

MONKEY LAUGHS IN THE TREES - Spreading Smiles

The monkey is full of laughter and is always ready to share a smile. By genuinely trying to make others happy, the clever monkey makes good choices and is well liked by others. Experience the contagiousness of smiles simply by smiling at those around you. Pay attention to how you feel when someone returns a smile back to you.

Key Points to Remember

- Try to make your partner smile only by smiling at them
- You can't touch them or do anything too crazy, only smiling
- Pay attention to what happens after the "game" is finished
